Motion Detector

WIRELESS WANDER ALARM

System has two components: a movement monitor and a wireless remote alarm carried by caregiver. When patient passes motion detector the alarm activates, warning caregiver that a patient is wandering.

Place motion detector near a doorway or location of choice (mounting tape is supplied). The detector makes no sound, so the resident won't become agitated.

The remote alarm has three tone settings and is effective up to 120 feet away from the detector. Alarm options include a door chime, melody, or a medium volume siren. The detector plugs directly into outlet or uses 9V battery (sold separately) and the alarm uses three AA batteries (sold separately).

Is proximity better than pressure for fall alarm sensors?

To set off an alarm, conventional sensor pads use the weight of the patient to compress the two surfaces of the pad together. So when the patient rises, the surfaces separate and the alarm sounds. Because these sensors rely on weight, a minimum weight and a relatively solid surface underneath is needed to enable compression.

Proximity Sensor Pads, however, don't use weight. They have only one surface and use the electrical field surrounding the body to make the contact. They are simpler and more robust, work on any surface (even air and fleece), and work with any brand of fall alarms. They can also roll, fold, and bend without breaking, so storage is simpler and reliability is enhanced.

Proximity is a newer technology that overcomes the issue of patients already up by the time the alarm sounds, and they are more durable and versatile in application.

Making alarms sound at Nursing Station

AliMed TR2, VOICE, and IQ Duo Plus alarms all support both pressure and proximity sensors. By simply plugging in a connector cord to the Nurse call jack at each bed (use cable 72358 or 2035 sold separately as accessories) the alarm can sound at the nursing station, and the patient can still use the nurse call button.

WHY Proximity?

CONVENTIONAL PADS work by patient weight pressing two surfaces together. These are the sensitized inner surfaces of the pad that are held apart by special foam. When the patient lifts up, the surfaces separate and trigger the alarm.

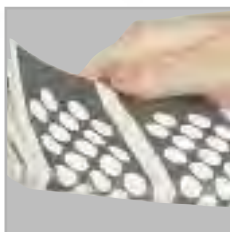

PROXIMITY PADS use closeness of a few millimeters and work without weight on them. Just a touch is all that's necessary. As the patient starts to move, the alarm triggers. So the patient does not have to be up, just getting up.

Use the 6-month Mylar™ Proximity Sensor for longer term, or multiple-patient use.

Why change from the pressure sensors?

- You can put them under shoulders, even if the patient is sitting up in bed. Unlike pressure pads, they are true early warning sensors that alert before the patient rises.
- You can use them on air mattresses, fleece overlays, and on the backs of chairs. Patients don't need to sit on them.
- You can use them on any patient, from the lightest to the heaviest—no weight restrictions.
- You can bend, roll, and fold them—and even cut the Tyvek sensor to length.

FOLD it...

TWIST it...

PUNCTURE it...

It still works!
